

Logistics: Instructor

With more than 25 years of experience in business, logistics, entrepreneurship, and management, Malaysia Henry brings real-world expertise to every professional endeavor. Her extensive career includes seven years in restaurant management, more than 15 years in logistics and supply chain operations, and more than a decade in higher education, where she has dedicated herself to developing the next generation of business and logistics professionals.

As a college instructor, she is passionate about student success and is committed to bridging the gap between classroom philosophy and industry practice. Her extensive industry background provides students with practical, career-focused learning experiences that prepare them for leadership roles in today's business environment.

In addition to her work in education, Malaysia is an entrepreneur who actively explores innovative business opportunities, digital products, and emerging technologies that help individuals achieve financial growth and professional development. Known for her dedication, leadership, and student-centered approach, Malaysia strives to inspire lifelong learning and professional excellence in everyone she serves.